AMERICA presents weekly thirty articles, editorials and comments; also ten to twenty book reviews and feature columns.

WEEKLY NEWS COMMENTS

have been a feature of AMERICA for forty-seven years. For many readers they are the most valuable service AMERICA gives. The present editorial staff of ten Jesuit priests has been assigned to cover weekly some sixteen areas of general news where Catholic interests are involved. These are: religion, education, economics, social welfare, human rights, labor, government, management, literature and other arts, the Vatican, the UN, Europe, Latin America, the Middle East, the Far East and Africa.

in AMERICA usually receive more care and deliberation from the editors than any other part of the magazine. The selection of the subjects, the position, the careful phrasing, the checking of sources, the discussion from every angle in staff meetings, the combined knowledge of that widely diversified group around the editorial table—all contribute to produce well-thought-out statements of Catholic positions every week. AMERICA's aim is to state its opinions with courage and clarity and to temper its views with charity.

FEATURE ARTICLES

by non-staff writers are given front-cover display in AMERICA. A long list of distinguished authors have written for this internationally recognized journal of opinion through the years. The new editor of AMERICA regularly asks authors to write on special subjects. Articles scheduled for spring and summer publication in AMERICA have already been commissioned. Don't miss them.

LITERATURE AND ARTS

is a special department in the back of AMERICA which has a following often quite distinct from the students of national and international affairs, who prefer "the front of the book." The book reviews are all requested by Father Gardiner, who keeps a large file of reviewers for a variety of subjects. Not every book received at AMERICA gets a review, but it is a tribute to Father Gardiner's literary acumen that year after year when the "best books of the year" are selected, you find that AMERICA has reviewed every one.
